"Class exemption of farm laborers would put the farm hand in the coolie class. He would be deprived of the honor of sharing in the full responsibilities of a citizen. Such an excomption would make the farms the haven for slackers of all kinds, including the son of the wealthy land baron who would sojourn with his car and his hunting dogs, for the summer where he felt safe from all care.

'As a large part of our volunteers, in all classes of service, came from the farms, such a restriction could not be fairly made now. showed that the "allies team push" which was ushered in at 5:25 o'clock this morning already has accomplished these things:

1. They tore out and flung back things the cross the crest and down the slopes of the Paschendaele ridge the right "hook" of the Germany army that dug in east and northeast of Ypres three years ago. This "hook" had stuck tenaciously in the British side after the whole center and left of the ridge had been cleared of Teutons. It is not entirely off the slopes yet, but it has no chance of clawing it, will carry her fight against farmers' for the British guns now thunder toward stamping out the U-boat pest bases along the Belgian coast. The Germans for the first time since they inaugurated their new defense sys-tems managed to fulfil one of its principal conditions: They launched their counter attack almost instantly after the allies onslaught began, instead of losing valuable time as they have in previous cases. As a result, the Franco-British storming colums encountered probably the roughest sledding they have had this year.

A fearful slaughter ensued. In the vital sectors the Teuton resistance, redubled by the waves rushing into the teeth of the attacking waves was crushed with deadly sureness. On the flanks the defenders faired a bit betflanks the defenders faired a bit better. They succeeding in holding on to a number of points which they must, however, yield sooner or later. One due to the increase of the material forces of the allies and the improved French fighting methods since adopted by the other armies, and also, as testified by the German staff itself, apropos of the battle of the Somme, in explaining their defeat: "to the perfect use of technical methods."

If the above comparison is extended today to the aftire France-English today to the entire Franco-English ront, if you consider that from April 15 to June 15 the enemy engaged 108 divisions against the Anglo-French forces, and, finally, if one bears in, mind that the successes of the British offensive at Ypres obliged the enemy to engage fifteen divisions during the last ten days you can understand why the German losses on the western front grow heavier and heavier. (They admit the loss of 116,000 men during the month of May, 140,000 men are estimated by the allied staff during the month of June, etc.)

attacks, a quantity of carefully pre-pared small actions which have been crowned with success and of which the bulletins are not able to give a clear idea, increase the attrition of clear idea, in the Germans.

the Germans.

This constant activity, coinciding with the weakness and inaction of the Russians, also explains why the Germans are obliged to maintain, and succeed in effectually maintaining, three times larger forces on the French front than on the Russian front. (In the beginning of the summer there were 156 German divisions to 700 kilometers on the French front to 700 kilometers on the French front, as against 130 Austro-German and Bulgarian divisions, seventy-seven of which were German, on the eastern front). It is known that the Russian winter practically puts a stop to all active operations, and that the reaction of the internal events in Russia on the eastern front has allowed Germany to consider it during four months as a veritable reserve for the western front.

Western front.

It clearly appears at present that the German staff, remembering the critical situation in which they found themselves following the Anglo-French success in the Somme in 1916, fars to see their Western front broken by the allied offenses in 1917.

Draw Picked Men.

Will the measures they have taken have been defensive in character intended to strengthen their resistance in the face of Anglo-French forces. Not content with declining to give battle and withdrawing a portion of their front on the Hindenburg position, they have transported to the Western front between January and April a certain number of divisions drawn from the Eastern front. As this did not suffice they have drawn the picked men from each of their Personal Actional PUBLICITY the picked men from each of their companies on the Eastern front, and international Clipped and promptly forwarded.

A rising vote of thanks was ten-dered Col. A. E. Randle in connec-tion with his report relative to the improvement of Anacostia Flats. The report of the committee of which Col. Randle is chairman recited that the flats have been the greatest draw-back this city has had since it was founded: that the government has made Manilla and the Canal Zone sanitary, leaving Anasostia Flats in the position of a breeding-place for diseases and a constant eyesore from the earliest history of the city. The time has come when the government must recognize that the National Capital should be made healthful, not only for the residents, but for the lawmakers who in recent years have been compelled to remain here prac-tically the whole year. The total expenditures on the pro-
